HOME OWNERS MUST PURCHASE LICENSE TAGS HERE

Tax Assessor George Heitzmann said this week Hancock County vehicle owners must purchase a 1966 state vehicle license tag in Hancock County to qualify for homestead tax exemptions.

The new vehicle tags are presently on sale.

State law requires a vehicle owner to list his correct address on applications for license tag renewals for use by the tax assessor in determining eligibility for homestead exemption on residence property.

Failure of a Hancock county resident to purchase a vehicle license plate in the county and to list his correct taxing district will mean an application for homestead exemption will not be approved, Heitzmann stated.

Mississippi Game and Fish Commission. Reports of successful hunting have come from many areas of the state. Looks as if the great outdoors were more interested in reaching the feeding grounds than they were the rain of shot from thousands of gun barrels. Early forecasts by the commission stated that the central portion of the state would be a good spot to search for doves as there will be plenty of food for the birds when the second season opens on October 23rd.

GOOD IDEA

Hunters should be sure before entering the fields that they have purchased this year's hunting license, and have it on their person. Guns must be plugged. A legal gun can hold only three shells—one in the chamber, and two in the magazine. Any gun holding more than three shells is illegal hunting equipment, and the bearer is subject to a fine.

Bag limits should be strictly observed by every man in the field. This year's limit is twelve birds per day.

Hunting hours are from noon until sunset. Hunters are urged to observe these hours. Little can be gained from shooting before noon anyway, so why risk a stiff penalty for violation?

W. H. (Buck) Tatum, Chief of Law Enforcement for the Game and Fish Commission, has issued a request for all hunters to abide by the rules and keep dove hunting an enjoyable sport.

Sportsmen in the central portion of the state will be glad to hear that a new series on WJTV will begin this Saturday depicting various types of Mississippi hunting. Ken Parks of WJTV started the series this past weekend with an on-the-spot coverage of the opening day of dove season.

Filmed in Rankin county, the film contains plenty of action and a goodly store of hunting tips for dove hunters.

The first of the film series can be viewed at 1:30 P.M. on Channel 12, and a new film will be aired every Saturday for fifteen weeks.

Mississippi hunters have at their disposal over 1 1/2 million acres of public hunting lands this fall, according to information released by the Mississippi Game and Fish Commission.

These lands, which comprise a large part of the G & F Commission's wildlife management program, are located in all parts of the state and offer hunting opportunities for all species of game during the regular hunting season. Specifically designed for wildlife management, the Game and Fish Commission has set aside several areas, called Wildlife Management Areas, for sportsmen additional opportunities to harvest their share of the game. These lands vary widely from location to location ranging from hardwood timber and brushy cover to open habitat of croplands. South Mississippians can hunt at Red Creek Management Area (located in Harrison, Jackson, and George counties), Wolf River Management Area (located in Pearl River, Lamar, and Marion counties), Leaf River Management Area (located in Perry county), Hugh White Management Area (located in Marion county), Home chitto Management Area (located in Amite and Franklin counties), and Chicawhatch Management Area (located in Jones and Wayne counties).

Specific hunting information may be obtained through the headquarters of each area, or through the Mississippi Game and Fish Commission in Jackson.

The squirrel and rabbit hunting seasons will open simultaneously on October 2, J. D. Hair, Jr., director of the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Commission announced today. The squirrel season will run until January 10, 1966 inclusive, and the rabbit season until February 15, 1966 inclusive. Daily bag for both species will be eight and possession 16.

Generally, squirrel reproduction has been good over most of the state. This is attributed to a relatively good mast crop last fall. A survey conducted two months ago showed more rabbits in evidence than there have been in the past five years in most sections of the state. With this in mind, plus other known facts, present prospects are for the best hunting season, Louisiana rabbit hunters have had in several years in most sections of the State. Hunting conditions, however, were badly hurt in southeast Louisiana by Hurricane "Betsy." Along Highway 90 just across Pearl River thousands of rabbits were seen drowned by the hurricane. The cotton tails seem to be plentiful right here in Mississippi and some good shooting can be looked for this year.

Shrimp are plentiful just now and can be purchased at most any seafood market for bait and eating purposes. There is nothing better than a shrimp cocktail, fried shrimp or shrimp gumbo. Shrimp are being bought for 40c and 45c cents per pound. What is cheaper for a real enjoyable meal for the whole family?

Was a pleasure to receive a card from Bob and Nell Dahlstrom who were vacationing in Mexico the past couple of weeks. Both are good sports and you can bet they enjoyed all sports offered in that Frenchie Danos, his wife and son caught 40 speckles and 7 red fish out at the marshes one day last week. Frenchie is from Goldens Meadow, Joe Kern reported catching some speckles and other salt water fish in front of the Yacht Club, including a blue fish, a specie of fish seldom caught in the Bay of St. Louis. This fish was probably something else brought in by Hurricane "Betsy," as they are caught usually in deep outside waters.

Curtis Favre and Charlie Sciana were fishing for salt water fish Sunday. They had some specks and flounders when we passed them. Both are good fishermen and usually get their share of fish. They come in handy when you have a lot of little pelicans to feed.

ALTON STEFFEL

Alton has been fishing in these parts for many years and knows how to catch fish. His favorite fishing is for red fish and he has landed some big ones. He has caught speckles by the hundreds. Most of his fishing was done out in front of Waveland and down in Bayou Caddy way. Alton did a lot of floundering and soft crabbing and always got his share.

FORESTRY NOTES

Intensive use of our forest...
 In the July 28th Jackson Clarion
 Ledger in an article on Rankin County. Of the 32,000 acres taken out of timber production in Rankin County recently, 27,500 acres were used in constructing the new reservoir 1,100 acres for interstate highways, 1,000 acres for a new flood levee and 2,200 acres
 for the new airport.
 The timbered acres of Mississippi are now producing at only about one-half of their potential. As our total acres continue to decrease, becomes more and more important that we manage the remaining land to produce as much as possible.
 Only through an accelerated production program can Mississippi hope to supply the raw materials necessary to keep her forest industries expanding. Mississippi
 Forestry Commission Forester Arthur Verdel of Hancock County assures local timber growers that he is available to help solve any forestry problems which they encounter in growing more timber on their land. More trees mean more money, jobs and prosperity
 for Mississippi citizens.
